Delivering Equality, Human Rights and Independent Living for Disabled People in Scotland

The Scottish Government's objective is to deliver real choice and control for disabled people in all areas of life, and all parts of Scotland, ensuring their dignity and respect at all times as full, and active, equal citizens of Scotland.

Independent living means "disabled people of all ages having the same freedom, choice, dignity and control as other citizens at home, at work, and in the community. It does not mean living by yourself, or fending for yourself. It means rights to practical assistance and support to participate in society and live an ordinary life."

These rights to independent living are enshrined within the United Nations Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities (UNCRPD), the Human Rights Act 1998, and the Equality Act 2010.

The UNCRPD is an international human rights agreement written by and for disabled people.

The principles (main beliefs) of this Convention are:

- Respect for everyone's inherent dignity, freedom to make their own choices and independence
- Non-discrimination (treating everyone fairly)
- Full participation and inclusion in society (being included in your community)
- Respect for differences and accepting people with disabilities as part of human diversity
- Equal opportunity
- Accessibility (having access to transportation, places and information, and not being refused access because you have a disability)
- Equality between men and women (having the same opportunities whether you are a girl or a boy)
- Respect for the evolving capacity of children with disabilities and their rights to preserve their identity (being respected for your abilities and proud of who you are)

How It's Being Delivered

In November 2012, the Independent Living programme partners, along with other public authorities and agencies, disabled people and their Organisations, agreed seven outcomes published in the 'Rights to Reality: A Framework of Action for Independent Living in Scotland 2013 to 2015'.

What you can do to make improvements

This survey is based on the seven outcomes.

Each of the seven outcomes describes what the issues are and what needs to change.

We would like to ask you to tell us what is working well and what barriers are you experiencing as a Disabled Person.

Please can you take 10 minutes to answer our short survey, containing 8 questions.

This is an on-going survey, however, responses will be collated on a regular basis.

The responses will be submitted back to Scottish Government to contribute to the delivery of equality, human rights and independent living in Scotland.

Your voice really matters and will help Scottish Government understand make the improvements you want.

Note Thank you very much for agreeing to participate in this survey.

The information provided by you in this survey will be used for research purposes. It will not be used in a manner which would allow identification of your individual responses.
